

Former Tinley Man In Frustrated Plot to Kidnap Iowa Editor

Jack Wyman, one time Tinley Park resident, who disappeared from Tinley Park about five years ago and who has been using the alias of James Lacey, was arrested in Chicago last week in connection with an unsuccessful attempt to kidnap E. P. Adler, Davenport, Iowa newspaper publisher in the Morrison hotel.

Charles Mayo, Wyman's partner in the Adler kidnap plot, committed suicide by hanging himself in a police cell Thursday. Mayo was a member of one of the oldest families of Howellton, Alabama.

Wyman's case was to come up in the Felony Court in Chicago this week. Efforts are to be made to ask the grand jury to indict him for kidnapping conspiracy.

Five years ago, Cook County Prosecutor Mal Coghlan said, Lacey, or Jack Wyman, deserted his wife and two children in Tinley Park. His wife divorced him shortly after. Following that he served a term in the North Dakota state prison for forgery.

Coghlan said he believed Lacey returned to Tinley Park a year ago and participated in a bank robbery.

The prosecutor said he believed Lacey or Wyman had never lived in Davenport, Iowa, the home of E. P. Adler, newspaper publisher, whom Mayo and Lacey selected as their first victim.

A bizarre plot to carry Adler out of the Morrison hotel in a huge trunk was frustrated when Adler put up a fight and frightened away the would be abductors.

Lacey used the name of Norman Wyman during his residence in Tinley Park, Coghlan said, and that probably was his true name.

The prosecutor believes that Lacey is a member of a prominent family in Fort Worth, Texas. His only request to authorities is that his family be kept in ignorance of the present case and they have agreed to that.

The prosecutor said Lacey made his first visit to Davenport three weeks ago with Mayo, adding that neither of them appeared to have criminal connections in either Davenport or Des Moines.

"They planned the kidnapping on the first trip to Davenport," Coghlan said. "They returned there a week ago last Wednesday and spent the day watching Adler thru the windows of the Davenport Times."

"They planned to kidnap him the following day as he left his office for lunch. However, they were frightened away by a man appearing to be a detective, who asked if they were looking for someone. They had an automobile parked outside the newspaper building with the motor running, in case an opportunity to kidnap Adler should develop. They got in the car and left after the supposed detective spoke to them."

Lacey or Wyman is 34 years old. He was paroled after serving nine months of a one to five year sentence in state prison at Bismark, N. D. He was sent there from Valley City, N. D., on a sentence for forgery.

When Wyman lived in Tinley he is said to have boasted to friends that he was a part Indian. He was a very good ball player and was the crack player on the Tinley Park baseball team.

Palos Man New Head of American Concrete Institute

At a recent convention of the American Concrete Institute held in Toronto, Canada, Arthur R. Lord, a resident of Palos Park was elected president of the Institute. Mr. Lord is known in Palos here and his friends here congratulate him on the high position and honor conferred upon him.

Orland Park Firemen Join First Aid Class

A class in "First Aid" was started February 26 in Orland Park. This class is for CWA workers, firemen or any lay men interested in this work. The Orland Park Fire Department met Monday evening at the village hall and formed a first aid class. Thirteen men were present. They will meet every Monday evening at 7 o'clock in the Orland Park village hall. The Red Cross is putting on these courses for six weeks free of charge.

The men completing the course will receive "First Aid" certificates from the American Red Cross. It is hoped that every fireman in this community will avail himself of this training as it will be the means of increasing the efficiency of the fire department in case of emergency as every man will be prepared to give first aid whenever the emergency arises not only when on duty but in every day life. Let us have a real and first aid class. The next meeting will be held March 5th at 7 p. m.

BROKEN FLANGE CAUSES WRECK ON WABASH

Traffic on the Wabash railroad was tied up Tuesday when a fast north bound freight train bound from Decatur to Chicago figured in a wreck a short distance northeast of New Lenox when a broken flange on a freight car wheel caused the derailment of 16 freight cars, fourteen of which were empty. The cars were badly splintered and about 400 ties and fifteen lengths of rail were torn out. The damage to the single track and rolling stock was estimated at $20,000. Luckily no one was hurt.

Wrecking crews and section men from Orland, and other nearby sections worked all day to clear the wreckage and rebuilding the torn up track.

Passenger trains were routed over the Illinois Central and all freight trains were routed over the E. J. & E. railroad at the junction point of the two roads south of New Lenox.

The regular suburban trains were operated from Chicago to Orland Park.

The accident occurred at 7:20 a. m. The scene of the wreck is a sort of a hoodoo as a number of wrecks have occurred at this same spot.

R. N. A. District Deputy Guest of Honor at Tinley

The Tinley Park R. N. A. camp had their regular and social meeting Tuesday night and the new officers had to put on the initiation work for the first time after just being installed last month and there is all honor due them, as they did the work in a fine manner. Neighbor Pearl Pearman and husband and sister from California were the honored guests. Mrs. Winsor was the new member and the neighbors are all glad to welcome her as one of them. The refreshment committee outdid themselves. The tables were beautifully decorated in green paper and shamrocks and the "eats" also were green in honor of St. Patrick. Neighbor Rogers read the saint's history. Neighbor Emilie Funk read an Irish poem and Neighbor Ruth Freitag sang the wearing of the green. It was all very interesting. Bunco was then played and all went home declaring they had a fine time.

Will County Farm Supply Co., To Hold Annual Meeting

More than a thousand people are expected to attend the joint annual meeting of the Will County Farm Bureau and the Will County Farm Supply Company in the St. John hall in Joliet on March 7th beginning promptly at 9:45 a. m.

The patronage dividend checks for Farm Bureau members who patronized the Will County Farm Supply Company during the fiscal year ending January 31, 1934 totaling approximately $20,000 is the largest issued in the history of the company. These checks will be distributed at the meeting and represent a 15 per cent return.

Musical numbers by the Mokena community orchestra under the direction of Lawrence Kohl and by quartets in the county that were in the music and drama contest the past season will be heard at intervals during the day.

Mokena M. E. Church To Hold Musical Program

The big social event in Mokena this week is the musical program to be sponsored by the Mokena M. E. church at the Mokena school auditorium Friday evening of this week at 7:45 p. m., when the Men's Chorus, and orchestra of the M. E. church of Lockport will be heard. A number of soloists also will appear on the program. A chalk talk by a twelve year old boy is another one of the interesting features on the entertainment bill. Wm. Weber, a former Mokena resident, now of Lockport will be in charge of the program. Everyone is invited to attend this musical treat.

MRS. W. A. COMBS TO BROADCAST

Mrs. Wallace B. Combs, State Garden Chairman for the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will broadcast on Tuesday, March 6 over station WJJD at 1:45 p. m.

rons has been forwarded to Washington asking that the change be made. When the change is made, Mrs. Amelia K. Fink, the new postmaster will install new post office fixtures, which she can rent from a post office fixture manufacturer.

Radio Masts May Be Used as Flag Poles

Negotiations are being conducted by the Orland Park Post of the American Legion toward the purchase of the two aerial masts of the discontinued WNAT Radio station. If secured, it is planned to offer them as flag poles, one to the village of Orland Park and the other to the village of Worth.

The dance which was proposed to be held St. Patrick's night has been deferred to some future date, to be decided upon later.

Preliminary work on organization for next summer's picnic has been started. A general ways and means committee has been appointed and it is hoped to make this year's picnic the greatest affair of this kind this Post has yet attempted.

The Post is increasing steadily in membership and any veteran who is eligible for membership is urged to get in touch with the Commander, Ray Doctor or Adjutant, Francis Glahn and join up with a live bunch of real fellows. Our territory includes Chicago Ridge, Worth, Palos Orland, and Mokena, and this invitation is extended to any eligible veteran in the above communities.

Orland Tavern Licenses Set at $150

The tavern or saloon license rates are agitating the smaller municipalities. At the meeting of the Orland Park village board Monday night, the council considered the matter and talked it over with village attorney Albert H. Krusemark and it was decided to set the license fee at $150 per year. An ordinance will be drafted and will most likely be acted upon and passed by the village board at their next meeting within the next two weeks.

Mokena C. Y. O. Basketball News

The Mokena C. Y. O. Girls started on a winning streak last Thursday, February 22nd, when they won their second league victory. They defeated St. Ray's Joliet, by a score of 17-5. Alice Horras helped along by making ten points. Later in the evening they defeated St. Anthony's with the final score being 10 - 8. Jungles and Horras lead the scoring each making four points.

Their third victory was a practice game with the High school girls. Eleanor Hall doing most of the scoring for the High school girls and Evelyn Wachter leading the C. Y. O. girls. The score at the end of the game was 19 - 8.

Our boys then decided to be contrary and lost three games last Sunday. St. Cyril's Hwg. 35, St. Mary's 14; St. Cyril's Ltg. 28, St. Mary's 22; Bur. A. C's. 39, St. Mary's 18.

Please notice the score of the St. Anthony's - St. Mary's game. If you want to see a fast game watch for announcement of a return game in Mokena. It will appear in this paper.

Frankfort Men's Endeavor Club Hold Supper

The Men's Endeavor Club of the Frankfort M. E. church put on a very fine chop suey supper in the parlors of the church last Friday evening. A real oriental background was created with the young men waiters attired in white and wearing the customary Chinese que or what is more commonly known as the China man's pig tail. The entire supper was prepared, cooked and served by the men folks and are they good cooks! It appears that many of the wives of these cooks are going to let hubby get the Sunday dinner from now on.

Everyone enjoyed the excellent supper and the fine spirit of friendliness which prevailed.

Terraplane A Speedy Car

The editor was given a demonstration of the performance and easy riding qualities of the 1934 Terraplane automobile as the guest of Arthur Bauch, Monday. Mr. Bauch is the Terraplane dealer at Frankfort.

The new Terraplane model is all that its name implies—part auto and part plane. Its performance is excellent. Rough gravel roads make no difference to the easy riding qualities of the car which seems to glide right over the bumps. Hills just seem to vanish and become a straight road. The new model is on display at Mr. Bauch's garage in Frankfort and is creating much favorable comment and from present indications there will be a number of Terraplane owners in this section before long.

Joliet Junior Choral Union Coming to Mokena

The Joliet Junior Choral Union of fifty voices will present a sacred concert at the St. John Evangelical church auditorium, Mokena on Sunday evening, March 11 at 8 o'clock. The concert is being sponsored by the Woman's Union of the church. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend.

Mokena Brewery Officials Hold Open House Party

C. A. Mitchel, Sr., president and C. A. Mitchel, Jr., vice-president of the Mitchel Brewery at Mokena, were hosts to about 150 guests at a getting-acquainted party at the plant Monday evening. Among the guests were tavern keepers, bartenders and business men from Chicago, Washington Heights, Blue Island, Mokena, Tinley Park, Joliet and other nearby towns.

There were desertations by various speakers, music and singing. A special entertainer from Blue Island put on a number of interesting numbers. Music for the evening was furnished by Fred Fisher a concertina player and H. Zemke, violinist, both of Chicago. And how they could play!

A personally conducted tour of inspection of the brewery was made. A bountiful supply of beer and sandwiches was served.

Harold Smith, a slight of hand performer from Chicago kept the gathering interested and created a lot of merriment with his clever stunts.

Mitchel's beer was acclaimed as a very good product in its line by many of the visitors and guests.

As this party was such a spontaneous success the brewery officials expect to sponsor other parties.

MOKENA P. T. A. DAD'S NIGHT A BIG EVENT

A large attendance enjoyed Dad's Night sponsored by the Mokena P. T. A., Tuesday evening in the Mokena school auditorium.

A very interesting and profitable program was rendered. Miss Vail favored with a piano solo. The high school girls executed a pretty dance entitled "Alice Blue Gown."

The primary room gave a Mother Goose Play.

Prof. Gale Hufford, instructor in the Joliet Township high school was the speaker of the evening.

Mr. Hufford's subject was "Boys" and in dealing with it he first spoke of the four sides of each life as being physical, mental, social and spiritual and showed in order to have a perfectly balanced life, these four sides should be equally developed. If one side is developed more than another, it makes an unbalanced life.

The speaker mentioned the most impressionable years as being from birth to 6, the age of starting school. The home training up to then, will show forth all thru school life. Mr. Hufford advocated a mother should care for her own baby and a father should share this care with her and if help is needed in the home a maid should be allowed to do the other work of the home. The baby should know its mother. Mention was made of the Loeb trial, when Loeb being asked if he had a mother, who by the way was seated in front of him at the time, said he did not have a mother, as he had been given over to paid workers and tutors since his birth.

A child should be read to by his parents, and when older will naturally read itself.

The influence in a child's life, according to Mr. Hufford are three: first, parents; second, chums, of which the parents should see that they are of a good type and third the teachers.

Parents should never be too busy not to be able to give attention to their children the speaker declared. A mother should never be too occupied with club and social obligations, so as not to have time to be a companion to her children and to help them in their work and problems. This also applies to the father.

The parents are the ones who should teach their children to pray. Lack of the feeling of obligation on the part of the parents today is one of the saddest affairs, Mr. Hufford concluded.

Hostesses for the evening were mesdames Nebeker, Roy Krapp and Heiman.

BASKETBALL BENEFIT GAMES DRAW CROWD

The big baseball benefit games held Sunday at the Tinley Park gym Sunday afternoon, drew a packed house. The Tinley Triangle Girls opened the bill against the Westpark A. C. from Joliet and although Tinley led 7 to 6 at the half they could not hold this slight advantage and lost 20 to 10.

The second game of the afternoon was between the Ridgewood Dodgers of Joliet and the C. R. I. & P. team from Hamilton Park. Joliet ended on the best end of a 28 to 20 score.

Last but far from least came the big event of the day. The Tinley Park Baseball Team vs. The Frankfort Baseball Team. The outlook was not so good for Tinley on comparing size and weight before game time, but the Tinley boys held a slim 17 to 15 advantage at the half and added to this lead to win 31 to 24. The Triangle Club wishes to thank everyone who aided them in co-operating with the ball team to make this trio of games a success. The proceeds of the games went to the benefit of the Tinley Park baseball team.

Friday the Thoburn Church of Chicago will bring three teams to

Wife of Head of Tinley Creosote Plant Dies in Chicago

Mrs. Margaret Mann Crolus, wife of William C. Crolus, former mayor of Joliet, and head of the William C. Crolus Company wood preservers of Chicago who own and operate a wood preservation plant at Tinley Park, died in Mercy hospital, Chicago Tuesday night after an illness of seven weeks. She had been suffering from heart disease.

Mrs. Crolus was a veteran newspaper woman and covered the World's Fair Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893.

Mrs. Crolus who was 61, was in newspaper work more than forty years and served on the staffs of the old morning Times and Record. Until her retirement about a year ago, Mrs. Crolus had been with the Chicago Daily News twenty-four years as dramatic and woman's page editor.

During the 1893 world's fair Mrs. Crolus published a magazine, Good Fortune. She was one of seven women who were honored last summer at a special dinner for newspaper men and women who covered the 1893 exposition.

During her service with The Daily News, Mrs. Crolus helped to cover many national conventions, of both parties.

She is survived by her husband, William C. Crolus, former mayor of Joliet, with whom she had lived in the Marshall Field apartments, 1401 Hudson avenue, a sister, Mrs. Charles Nixon of Jacksonville, Fla.; a niece, Mrs. Wallace Derry of Macomb, Ga., and a nephew, Edward L. Nixon of Chicago.

She was united in marriage with Mr. Crolus in 1921.

The body laid in state at Hursen's undertaking establishment, 1820 South Michigan avenue, until Friday morning. Funeral services were held at Immaculate Conception Roman Catholic church, 1415 North Park avenue, near Schiller street, with high mass at 10 a. m. Burial was in Mount Olivet cemetery. Pallbearers were former newspaper associates.

Mr. Wade H. Arwood of Tinley Park a close friend of the Crolus family, visited Mrs. Crolus in the hospital shortly before she died.

ORLAND COUPLE OBSERVE 59th WEDDING DAY

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Sayers of Orland Park have traveled the pathway of life together for fifty-nine years and to help them celebrate this happy occasion, their children, grandchildren and great grand child and niece, Mrs. Peter Sinclair of New Lenox, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Creer, Sunday, February 25th.

It was a real privilege to share this happy occasion with this fine couple who have so generously given of their kindly spirit to their relatives and neighbors.

A lovely day was spent by all and sincere hopes were expressed that health and strength may be given them that all may enjoy many more such happy occasions.

A bouquet of roses was presented to them, with a rose to symbolize each passing year.

MEET TO FORM TINLEY PARK WOMAN'S CLUB

Thursday afternoon, March first a meeting was held in the Tinley Park M. E. church for the purpose of organizing a Woman's Club for Tinley Park. Further particulars regarding this meeting will be published next week.

Tinley and Sunday afternoon Ridgewood Joliet will be here for a trio of games.

AGED GREEN GARDEN RESIDENT PASSES BEYOND

Mrs. Adam Sangmeister, aged 86 years, nee Sippel, died Feb. 22nd at her home in Frankfort after a few weeks illness. Mrs. Sangmeister was born in Germany and came to the United States with her parents when she was 11 years old.

The family settled in Orland township. Following her marriage to the late Adam Sangmeister, a farmer, they moved to Green Garden and later to Frankfort. Mr. Sangmeister died in 1921.

Seven children were born to this union, five surviving. They are two sons, Conrad of Frankfort, Christ of Green Garden; three daughters, Bertha of Frankfort, Mrs. John Klose of Mokena and Mrs. Henry Laun of Chicago.

The funeral was held Sunday from the late home at 1:30 to the Frankfort M. E. church. The Rev. C. F. Schellhase officiated. Burial was in the Rose Hill Cemetery in Green Garden.

Frankfort Applies For $24,000 PWA Gym Project

Frankfort has made an application for a PWA project by way of a new $24,000 gym. The matter has been taken up with the government and has been given favorable consideration. The government stands ready to give a thirty per cent out right grant of the total sum, and furnish a loan for the balance over a twenty year period at four per cent. The legal end of the application was handled by attorney A. H. Krusemark and the application papers have been forwarded to Washington. Soon as the project is approved the matter will be submitted to a vote of the tax payers of the school district in which the gym will be located.

ORLAND FARMER FIRST ON CORN HOG SIGN UP

To Gottfried Schifferer of Barrington Township and to John Kimmel of Orland Township goes the distinction of being the first farmers in the north half and the south half of Cook County respectively to sign a contract application and join the corn-hog program, according to O. G. Barrett, Farm Adviser.

Mr. Schifferer who farms 121 acres in Barrington Township signed the application at the Farm Bureau office February 9. Mr. Schifferer is one of Barrington's representative farmers, having been on his present farm for about forty years. His application shows that during the two base years of 1932 and 1933, he grew an average of fifty acres of corn and farrowed and marketed 21 (continued on back page)

And Now I Will Deposit All My Savings

Well, I've saved so much on the things I've bought today that now I have a tidy little sum to deposit in The Orland State Bank. I love to go there too because this Bank has such an atmosphere of security. And their service is so prompt and courteous one would think I was depositing a million dollars.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By
THORNTON W. BURGESS
HOW NIMBLEHEELS GOT AWAY

PETER RABBIT was all a-shake. It was partly excitement, partly fear, and partly hope. You remember how he had gone back to the dear Old Brier Patch without a doubt in his mind that little Nimbleheels had been caught and carried away to the Green Forest by Hooty the Owl. You remember how sad Peter was and how he had sighed and sighed again, and how a thin, high, squeaky voice had asked if he was in pain.

That voice made Peter jump. It sounded exactly like the voice of little Nimbleheels. If Peter hadn't been absolutely sure that by this time Nimbleheels must be in the stomach of Hooty the Owl he would have said that this was the voice of Nimbleheels. But how could it be? It couldn't. His ears must have fooled him or else—"Who are you?" whispered Peter. "Are you a ghost?"

"I should say not!" exclaimed the same thin, high, squeaky voice indignantly. "There is no ghost about me! For goodness sake, what is the matter with you, Peter Rabbit?" Out in front of Peter hopped Nimbleheels.

Peter backed away hurriedly. "Go away," said he. "This isn't you. It can't be. You were caught by Hooty the Owl and carried away for his dinner."

Very Cautiously Peter Reached Out and Touched Nimbleheels.

ner. You can't be in his stomach and here, too, so this can't be you. Go away, please."

"Pinch yourself and wake up, Peter," squeaked Nimbleheels. Then he began to laugh with all his might. Peter frowned.

"I don't see anything to laugh at," said he rather crossly, for he still couldn't believe what his eyes saw. Nimbleheels kept right on laughing until he was quite out of breath. "I may not be myself," said he, "but I'm quite sure I'm not anybody else. As for Hooty the Owl, if his stomach feels any fuller on my account I'm willing to make him the same kind of a meal every day. Go over and ask him. I'd like to know what he says."

"Early to bed and early to rise," says stepping Stella, "and the neighbors would have nothing to talk about."

First Vessel to Founder in Panama Canal

THE Dutch freighter Brion has the distinction of being the first vessel to founder in the Panama canal. She went down in Gatun lake about half a mile south of the lock after having developed a dangerous list that led her commander to try to beach her. The crew was rescued by Panama canal launches.

Just touch me, Peter. You'll find I'm real enough."

Very cautiously Peter reached out and touched Nimbleheels. Then his face cleared and he began to laugh himself. "I never was more sure of anything in all my life than I was that you had been caught and carried away by Hooty," said he when he could stop laughing long enough. "You asked what was the matter with me. I was sighing on your account, Nimbleheels. I was sighing because my heart was so sad at the thought that you had been killed and that I should never, never see you again. When you spoke I thought my ears must be playing tricks on me. I certainly did. How did you get away?"

"With the help of a friendly Black Shadow," replied Nimbleheels. "But for that I might be just where you thought I was. I was getting very tired, and two or three times Hooty almost caught me. Then just as I jumped that Black Shadow swept over us and Hooty couldn't see where I landed. I jumped twice more before the Black Shadow passed over, and by that time I was safe. Then I hurried over here to the dear Old Brier Patch to wait for you. You were very wise not to move when you sat out there in the moonlight, Peter Rabbit. I never could have sat like that right in plain sight. I never could have, possibly."

"That was nothing," replied Peter modestly. "I learned when I was very young that there are times to run and times to freeze and sit tight. This was one of those times. Tell me, Nimbleheels, doesn't such a long tail bother you?"

STUFFED DATES

DO WE ever tire of the delectable dates? They are so good to serve with the afternoon tea, in salads, as desserts, as a confection, or stuffed with various fillings, one has an infinite variety and they are always welcome. The following are a few fillings for stuffed dates:

Orange Peanut.

To one-third of a cupful of peanut butter add slowly five tablespoonfuls of orange juice and one-half teaspoonful of grated orange rind. Fill the dates and roll them in chopped salted peanuts.

Apricot Coconut.

Wash one cupful of dried apricots. Steam over boiling water to soften, then run through a food chopper with

SOLDIER BOY!

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SOLDIER Boy, are the days too long?
Is the sun too bright on your narrow walls?
Are you weary now of the robin's song,
And the wind's soft voice as the evening falls?
The lightest breath is too hard to bear
When a little life is so filled with care.
Soldier Boy, you are ten years old,
And your boyish soul has a cross to hold.

Soldier Boy, it's a bitter fight,
But your smile is valiant for those who come
Hoping to make your day more bright
With a gift to add to your meager sum.
You have a daily bout with pain,
And the years will drag till you run again,
With Health's quicksilver in your feet,
And a cry of joy for the friends you meet!

Soldier Boy, I would gladly give
My heart's firm beat and the strength of my hands,
If it would mean your right to live,
And scamper with joy on the summer sands.

Soldier Boy, it's an eagle's flight
To the lovely land where there is no night,
And the wings of your spirit are firm and true,
As onward and upward they carry you!

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of strong laxatives may do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. All druggists, ready for use, in big bottles. Member N. R. A.

THE WEDDING MARCH MURDER

SYNOPSIS

Waiting in the minister's study, Jim Franklin, about to be married to Doris Carmody, is stabbed to death. Peter Cardigan, novelist, and amateur detective of some note, with Sergeant Kilday, begin the official investigation. Franklin, while waiting, had visitors, among them his mistress, "Choo Choo" Train; his intended wife's father, Ambrose Carmody; her brother, Rylie; Daniel Bullis, politician, and a woman in a blue frock. Rylie Carmody admits trying to stop the wedding, after being informed by Webster Spears that Franklin was still friendly with "Choo Choo," despite his approaching marriage. Kilday secures the dead man's keys. From Callis Shipley, one of the bridesmaids, Rylie's friend, the investigators learn nothing. An interview with Bullis is fruitless. Webster Spears admits informing Rylie Carmody of Franklin's relations with "Choo Choo," for Doris Carmody's sake, in the hope of preventing the wedding. Fletcher, Franklin's man-servant, is recalcitrant. An interview with Milo Dunbar, Franklin's law partner, and search of the dead man's office, reveals nothing of importance. Choo Choo admits her relations with Franklin were to continue after his marriage. She says she visited Franklin at the church because a telephone message from Fletcher told her to come. Fletcher denies calling the actress.

CHAPTER VI

Cross-Examination

"Do you think Choo Choo is lying about that phone call?" Kilday inquired as the two men started back down-town. "I can't figure her out."

Peter puffed his cigarette meditatively. "She received a telephone call, I'm satisfied of that," he replied finally. "Why else would she have changed her mind about going to the wedding? And she did change her mind. Franklin was surprised to see her."

"However, it wasn't Fletcher who called. I can see no reason why he shouldn't tell the truth about it. What I am trying to determine is whether Choo Choo really believed it was Franklin's servant, or is only trying to make us think so, in order to conceal the identity of the person who really did call."

"She seemed mighty surprised that Fletcher didn't remember it," Kilday volunteered doubtfully.

"I can't forget that she's an actress," Peter confessed. "I find myself wondering how much of what she said and did was sincere, and how much was only for our benefit." He lighted another cigarette, blew out the match and holding it between thumb and forefinger, inspected it slowly, as though, in the charred match head, he might find the solution to the puzzle which was worrying him. "What if it were the woman in blue—that would provide a motive for Choo Choo's visit, and for the crime. I don't think she was acting when she told us she loved Jim Franklin. It must have been that, or else," he still scrutinized the match, "the murderer knew of Choo Choo's relationship with Franklin, and telephoned her in an effort to bring her to the church. If that is the case, of course this actress had nothing to do with the crime and was only drawn in, by the real culprit, in an effort to confuse the trail." Peter shrugged. "If that's what happened, we're farther from a solution than ever."

The car had reached police headquarters, and the novelist followed Kilday up the battered steps. On the sergeant's desk lay the revolver discovered in the rectory garden, the dagger with which the crime had been committed, and the stained curtain on which the murderer had wiped the blood from the weapon.

"Every blessed thing we have to go on," complained the sergeant disconsolately. "Except, of course, the thumb-print on the gun. The keys won't be much help now. The only one we haven't identified is obviously not a door-key. It couldn't fit the apartment of our woman in blue."

"Just because the pieces of the puzzle don't fit the first time we try them, is no sign we don't have all the pieces," retorted Peter.

"I'm merely pointing out that the keys are eliminated as one of the pieces to the puzzle," exclaimed Kilday ruefully. "I was hoping that they would help us identify this woman in blue, when we found her. But now," he tilted back his chair and gazed ceilingward through the haze of smoke that clouded the room. "Now I think you have given me a hint that is just as helpful."

He drew another long, reflective puff on his stogie.

"The trouble with this case," he began, presently, "is too many suspects. Of course, there aren't many genuine ones, but we haven't needed clues so much. Not since we've had an opportunity to talk to all these people. Peter, has anything struck you as peculiar about this case?"

"Not unless it's the fact that you've just mentioned—too many suspects."

The sergeant leaned forward, a smile warming the harsh lines of his face. "You've laid your finger on it," he said. "Now what would you say that indicates? No, don't interrupt. I know the answer myself. Whoever murdered Franklin purposely entangled some of these others in the case in order to drag a herring across his own trail, eh? Isn't that the way you figure it?"

Peter eyed his friend carefully. "It looks that way," he admitted.

"All right, then," Kilday made no effort to conceal his exuberance. "Let's find out who seems to have been manipulating the herring. Let's find out who seems to have been involved in this case by some one else. When we eliminate this class, perhaps we'll have the murderer. First," he began the enumeration of the suspects on his fingers, "there's Choo Choo. She claims some one phoned her, saying he was Fletcher, and told her Franklin wanted her to come to the church. Royce heard the argument, after she arrived there. Franklin wasn't expecting her. Of course, she may not be telling us the truth, but just at present, she seems to be telling a straight story. And Franklin wasn't expecting her. So it looks as though she was part of the red herring that the real culprit dragged across the trail to throw us off the scent. We'll eliminate her, for the time being."

"Then there's Fletcher. He hasn't been an important suspect, up to now, but I'd say that this eliminates him from further consideration, too. Why? Because who ever called 'Choo Choo' was the murderer. If that was Fletcher, he wouldn't have given her his name."

"Third, Ambrose Carmody." Kilday turned down another finger. "He was dragged into it by that anonymous telephone call. Very similar to the trick employed to bring Choo Choo to the church. Strike him off."

"Fourth, Rylie Carmody. He was drawn into it by the story told him by Webster Spears and now we're getting hot."

"Hold on," Peter objected. "If you follow this method through, you'll eliminate every one, won't you?"

The sergeant, enthused over his idea, shook his head smilingly. "Not so you can notice it," he retorted. "Don't overlook this fact. We don't know who called Choo Choo. We aren't certain who phoned Ambrose Carmody. But we do know who told Rylie. It was Webster Spears. And if Spears involved one of them, what's to prevent him from being the one who involved the others?"

"Only one thing," the novelist replied soberly. "If he was clever enough to draw these others into the case without revealing his identity, why did he tell Rylie Carmody personally? Why didn't he telephone him, or write him an anonymous letter? If he took these other precautions to remain concealed, how did he happen to slip up here?"

But Kilday had an answer ready, partly born of his enthusiasm for the new theory, partly hatched from the relentless logic of his own experience. "They all slip up, sooner or later. I've never known it to fail. There aren't any perfect crimes. This is the flaw in this one. It only required a little reasoning to discover it."

"How about the others?" Peter was still reluctant. "How do you explain the presence of the woman in blue? What was Callis Shipley doing back there?"

"The woman in blue could have been drawn into it just as Choo Choo Train was. Spears only needed to know another woman with whom Franklin had had an affair to add a new note of mystery to the case which would keep us puzzled and throw us off the track of the real criminal. As for the Shipley girl, I don't know—yet. But I will, before long. I've sent for her. She lied to us about Rylie taking her home. Either she lied to us about Spears' remark in the church, or else Spears lied. Personally, I don't think Spears would have made such a remark, which obviously would draw suspicion to himself, later. Not if he had already planned a murder and arranged all this false evidence to throw us off the track. This girl is going to have to explain to me how she knew there had been a murder, too, and what she was doing at Webster Spears' house last night. I don't know how she fits into this case, but she fits, somewhere. I'll soon know where."

Reluctantly, Peter realized that his friend was only giving expression to the misgivings that had been troubling him concerning this girl. Only he had not before thought of her as an accomplice of Webster Spears. He had associated her with Rylie Carmody, for whom she had seemed chiefly concerned. And he had preferred to explain her evasions as her anxious effort to extricate Rylie from the evidence which seemed to be entangling him. In that light, he had been able to find an explanation for the fact that she had lied to him. It offered a possible explanation for her visit to Webster Spears the previous evening—a visit which the latter had denied. For, in spite of himself, he had been stirred by the girl's defense of young Carmody during that interview with her. Her courage had quickened his sympathies. He thought again of the manner in which she had appealed to him. He recalled the anxiety mirrored in her blue eyes. Surely this girl had had no part in the murder of Jim Franklin. She was scarcely more than a child. He thought of that second deep knife thrust that had ended Franklin's life. Could that blow have been guided by a girl's hand?

Yet, in spite of his misgivings, and partly because of them, too, for he realized that he was not an impartial judge where this girl was concerned, he grudgingly admitted to himself that Kilday's arguments possessed a great deal of logic. By all means, have the girl down here. She had some questions to answer. And he was curious to see what his own reaction to her answers would be, this time. He would not again be fooled by a pretty face.

"How does Dan Bullis fit into your new theory?" Peter was still exploring the possibilities of the detective's argument.

"He doesn't fit," the sergeant admitted. "The nearest I can figure, his part in the affair was accidental. He was anxious to see Franklin, and his arrival at the church when he did simply played into the murderer's hands."

"How about Nick Royce? Another accident?"

"Accidents don't come in pairs. No, Royce was best man. Where else could he have been? He tells a pretty straight story, too."

"Except at one point," Peter pointed out. "He claims Franklin asked him to go out in front and find Milo Dunbar. It was important that he find him, because Franklin was worried after his interview with Rylie Carmody, lest the youngster interfere with the wedding in some manner. Yet Royce never found Dunbar. He says he couldn't find him. Dunbar tells us he was there. We know he was present, because he joined us in the study, after the crime was discovered."

"How much importance do you attach to that?" exclaimed Kilday impatiently. "There were hundreds of people out in front. There's nothing very surprising in the fact that Royce couldn't find one man, in all that crowd."

In spite of his reluctance where Callis Shipley was concerned, Peter was compelled to admit that the sergeant's theory was the best that had yet been advanced. It dovetailed into more of the known facts than any other.

"What do you plan to do next? Arrest young Spears?"

Sergeant Kilday made a wry face. "Not too fast. Don't forget who he is. I've got to have my case corroborated before I dare go that far. The Shipley girl will be here before long. I'll see what I can get out of her. In the meantime," he pulled a cigarette case from his pocket, gingerly, and carefully unwrapped the handkerchief in which it was swathed. "Here are samples of Choo Choo Train's finger-prints." He pressed the buzzer on his desk, as he continued, "Spears is my man, but I'm not overlooking any bets. I'm going to compare fingerprint samples of every known suspect with those we found in the study."

"Get plates on these prints, O'Malley," he ordered the assistant who answered his call, "and bring me the negatives of those you found in the study at St. Matthew's yesterday. Also the one of the thumb-print on the gun."

Five sets of finger-prints had been discovered in the search of the room where Jim Franklin had met his death. Four of these, Kilday was inclined to believe, were made by men. The fifth set belonged either to a woman or to a man with exceptionally small hands.

O'Malley was excited when he returned with the photographs. "We've identified the print on the gun with one of these sets we found in the study," he reported eagerly. "Look here, Sergeant."

Side by side, he laid two negatives, as he indicated the similarity of whorls and lines which marked the two prints as identical.

Kilday rubbed his hands delightedly. "Take a squint at them, Peter," he invited. "Here's one time our finger-prints are going to prove a case for us."

The novelist examined the prints carefully. "But why didn't we find any prints on the knife, then? We know the murderer used it, but carefully wiped it off later. I don't understand why he should have been so careless about the revolver, or about leaving finger-prints in the room. Where's the Joker?"

"You said it," exclaimed the sergeant. "Carelessness! He didn't think we'd take the trouble to look for a gun in the garden, after we found the knife. And some time or another, he must have left some prints in the study. If not, these two wouldn't match. Peter, I'm going to have the man who killed Franklin locked up by night."

"I hope you're right," Cardigan looked doubtful.

Kilday only grinned. "Here," he wrote down a list of suspects in the case, beginning with Webster Spears, then read it aloud. "Spears, Rylie Carmody, Ambrose Carmody, Callis Shipley, Choo Choo Train, Daniel Bullis, Nicholas Royce and Doctor Abernathy. With the exception of the woman in blue, that's the list."

"I already have Choo Choo's finger-prints on that cigarette case," he continued, "and Miss Shipley will be here before long, so you don't need to worry about her." He was addressing his assistant. "As for the others, I want specimens of their prints as soon as possible. Of course, you can't afford to be obvious about it. Use cigarette cases and pretense. You want to question them about something else. Understand?"

O'Malley nodded. "Good. Clean it up as quickly as possible. Before you go, though, tell them to hurry up a report on Choo Choo's prints. I don't want any time wasted."

"Now we're getting somewhere," he grunted as O'Malley left the room. Then he wheeled, with a gesture of annoyance, as his assistant returned. "Of course I wasn't in any hurry about those prints," he began, doily. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

BEAUTY TALKS

By

MARJORIE DUNCAN

EYEBROW GROOMING

HERE is a letter from one of my young readers which is in itself an excellent beauty lesson:

"The other day I decided to try an experiment on my brows. Sitting before my dressing table which has a triple mirror, I blanched out my own brow line with soap and then with an eyebrow pencil drew different brows, some deeply arched, some short, some elongated to see what varied expressions could be achieved. The result was amazing. But after trying a half dozen different 'styles' I decided that after all nature was a better artist than 'yours truly.' I do find, however, that your advice about keeping the brows neat and groomed has helped heaps. I have been using the brush more and the tweezer less, as you suggested, and the result is certainly worth the effort. Always after powdering I brush first the wrong way and then the right and I merely pluck the little hairs that are 'out of march.' I use the eyelash grower and darkener on my brows as well as my lashes. Well, this letter may seem pointless, but its object is to tell you that I now have a pair of perfectly behaved eyebrows, thanks to your suggestions."

There you have several timely hints on making brows beautiful. The days of torture and plucking to a fine line are over. But the tweezers still has its place on every modern woman's dressing table. It is used less frequently yet to greater advantage. Neat brows add their bit of good grooming to the "finished" face so much in evidence in our smart world of today. Like children, brows can be trained.

If your brows are too unruly and a great many of the little individual hairs are "wild," which means out of place, go to a reputable beauty salon and have them shaped and tweezed. Then just as soon as you get home, start your brushing campaign. Learn to brush your brows as you do your hair.

Straggly hairs above the bridge of the nose should be removed. Too thick brows should be thinned down. Occasionally, though cases are rare, brows grow too far down over the outer corner of the eyes and therefore plucking to shorten is necessary. More often the brows are too short and clever use of an eyebrow pencil gives a more elongated and flattering appearance.

Look at your forehead. Others will. It should be as smooth and clear as Paris marble. Remember that the forehead is part of the face. Remember that the new hats are revealing the forehead as well as the rest of the face.

SANITARY BEAUTY PARLORS

ON A recent lecture tour I had occasion to drop in at a strange beauty parlor in a strange city one rainy day. One of the women waiting ahead of me had a worried expression on her face. After several minutes she evidently gathered enough courage to speak to me, voicing the subject of her annoyance, the unsanitary measures of the establishment. I had already noticed that a single comb and scissors were being used by the hair-cutting department, that towels were not changed between manicures. The fact that I was about to walk out myself added to my companion's courage and out we both walked.

She explained that she had never been to the shop before, had just dropped in because of the rain and suggested the beauty salon she usually patronized.

When we reached her shop I had a very pleasant surprise. The difference between the two parlors was so marked. No wonder the first had annoyed my new acquaintance. Such sparkling cleanliness, sanitary measures observed to the letter, a manager to supervise, consult with patron, see that everything clicked smoothly, even a few usherettes to receive clients cordially and direct them to a comfortable waiting room.

The walls, ceilings and floors of this salon were immaculate and not a sign of snipped hair anywhere. Clippers, tweezers, scissors, and all other articles are sterilized as well as the combs and brushes. Individual cotton pads are used instead of powder puffs. The neck duster of the unsanitary salon is taboo.

Not only is every sanitary precaution taken in this model salon, and happily, there are many of them throughout the country, but in addition every comfort is provided for the customer. A dye test is given by a specialist in hair dyeing; a test curl by the permanent waving expert; there's a separate "daylight" room where a customer may choose in privacy a transformation to match her own hair.

Visions of the old-fashioned community drinking cup and family hair brush make us shudder. Don't be secretly shocked by unsanitary beauty parlors. Do what we did, walk out and choose a model salon to patronize.

If you use mascara or eyeshade it is better to use too little than too much. Too little seldom offends.

Lesson for March 4

JESUS' TESTIMONY CONCERNING HIMSELF

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 11:2-12:50.
GOLDEN TEXT—Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matt. 11:28.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Shows He Is God's Son.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Shows He Is God's Son.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Who Jesus Was.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Tells Who He Is

1. How the Kingdom Was Received (ch. 11).

In showing the attitude of the people toward the king and his kingdom four classes of hearers are described.

1. The perplexed hearers, like John the Baptist (vv. 2-11).

John believed that Jesus was the Christ (v. 2) but was somewhat perplexed as to the manner of the establishment of the kingdom. In the Old Testament predictions two lines in the Messianic prophecies are presented. The one sets him forth as the suffering one (Isa. 53); the other as the invincible conqueror (Isa. 55:3). Indeed, in Isaiah 60:1, 2 we have the two advents in one view (Luke 4:17-21). The Baptist had in his preaching mainly emphasized the prophecies which made the king to be a mighty conqueror (Matt. 3:10-12). He said the axe is laid unto the root of the tree; that the chaff was to be separated from the wheat and the chaff burned. John saw Christ as the one who would remove the sins of his people by the shedding of his blood (John 1:27), but he failed to see the interval between the time of his suffering and the time of his triumph. John's faith was not failing him, neither did he send this deputation to Jesus for the sake of his disciples. He was a true prophet and a faithful man but was perplexed.

2. The violent hearers (vv. 12-19). These were willing to receive the kingdom according to their own way but were not willing to conform to its laws. They were ready to seize it with violent hands. Christ had told them before the coming of John the Baptist, the prophets and the law were the source of ascertaining the divine will and that if they would receive John, he would be the Elijah to lead them into the kingdom age. Their ears were closed to everything but their own selfish desires. They would not repent when called upon to do so by John, nor rejoice when called upon to do so by Christ (vv. 17-19).

3. The stout-hearted unbelievers (vv. 20-24). In Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum Christ had done most of his mighty works but the people deliberately set their hearts against him and his message. It was not for lack of knowledge and opportunity that they were unsaved, but because of their purposeful rejection of Christ. Tyre and Sidon, Sodom and Gomorrah were filled with immoral profligates and idolaters, but they will be more tolerably dealt with in the day of judgment than those who willfully reject Jesus Christ.

4. Hearers who are babes in spirit (vv. 25-30). There were some among the people who heard Jesus with childlike faith. Christ invites these to come to him and receive rest.

II. The Antagonism to the King and the Kingdom (ch. 12).

The immediate occasion for their wicked determination was what Christ did on the Sabbath day.

1. Jesus' relation to the Sabbath (v. 21). The hungry disciples were plucking corn on the Sabbath. With this the Pharisees found fault. To their cavils Jesus replied and showed that God's purpose in instituting the Sabbath was to serve man's highest interests.

2. The Pharisees hold a council to destroy him (v. 14).

3. Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, the unpardonable sin (vv. 22-32). The occasion of their blasphemy was the casting out of the demon. The effect of this work was twofold.

a. Upon the multitude (vv. 22, 23). They were amazed and cried out: "Is not this the son of David?" Implying that his mighty works indicated him to be the Messiah.

b. Upon the Pharisees (vv. 24-32). When they heard what the people were saying their anger and satanic malice were aroused. They did not deny the miracle but sought to account for it without acknowledging him as the Messiah. Therefore they affirmed that he was in league with the devil. Christ exposes their folly and charges them with awful guilt. They attributed the work of the Holy Spirit to the devil. This Christ calls blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, for which there is no pardon.

SHE FOUND A WAY OUT

She Had to Have Money and This Is How She Earned It

Mrs. Louise Timbarthy, like thousands of other women, a short time ago was confronted with a positive need for more money. Her husband had been out of work for some time and their savings were almost gone. She couldn't have taken a regular job if she had found one because her children needed her care. But she found a way out of her difficulties, and she is willing to tell the world how she did it. She said she was reading this newspaper one day when she noticed this advertisement:

CUT ME OUT
and mail me, with your name and address to L. J. AMES, Inc., 360 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago. I will bring you a free sample of L. J. Ames Face Powder and details how to make $5.00 to $10.00 a week extra in your spare time.

She answered the advertisement and received the free samples by return mail with a letter telling her how to start in business.

Mrs. Timbarthy started to work that day by showing the samples to some of her friends. She didn't meet with any encouragement. The second day was a little better. The third day was just "terrible." In fact, the results from her first week's work were sad and disappointing. She found she had earned exactly $1.10.

However, on the fourth week orders began to come in from the women to whom she had shown her samples and her second calls were more successful. She earned $14.75 on her fourth week and for the past three months her income has ranged from $6.00 to $21.00 a week, according to the number of hours she has been able to spare from her household. Besides, she gets all her own beauty aids and cosmetics at less than wholesale price.

She advises any woman confronted with the same problem she faced to cut out and mail the little advertisement.—Adv.

Lottie O'Neill Wins Praise For Her Excellent Record

Bouquet, and brickbats were distributed about evenly in the second installment of the biennial report of the Legislative Voters League on the records of members of the general assembly whose terms expire this year. The league has this to say of the three representatives of the 41st senatorial district:

John L. Walker, Rep. Joliet-Ending fifth term creditably. Lottie Holman O'Neill, Rep. Downers Grove, Record highly creditable. Michael F. Hennebery, Dem. Wilmington-Work was not convincing.

Mrs. O'Neill is one of the best representatives the 41st district has had in Springfield and she says what she thinks and is unafraid to do her duty to her constituents and is a very popular candidate.

Cook County Corn and Hog Sign-up Dates

Such numbers of the 3348 farmers living in Cook County are asking for information on the Corn-Hog sign up with much confusion and delay encountered at the office. For the convenience of the farmers in the County, the following days are set aside for each Township as Sign-Up Days at the Farm Bureau office: For sign-up Farm Bureau office at Blue Island: Bloom, Mon. Mar. 5; Bremen, Tues. Mar. 6; Lemont, Wed. Mar. 7; Lyons, Thurs. Mar. 8; Orland, Fri. Mar. 9; Palos, Sat. Mar. 10; Rich, Mon. Mar. 12; Thornton, Tues. Mar. 13; Worth, Wed. Mar. 14. Farmers residing in each township should arrange to call at the office on the date listed for their township, secure their information, and make application for contract if they so desire.

The government requires a work sheet for every farm in Cook County, and it will be necessary that every farmer come to the office and fill out a work sheet regardless if he makes application for a contract or not. These dates are very important to insure your being taken care of with the least amount of delay.

Henry M. Bauer

of Joliet,

Candidate for Republican Nomination For Sheriff

Henry M. Bauer of Joliet urged by his many friends and acquaintances over the county, has announced his candidacy for the nomination of Sheriff of Will County at the coming primary on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Bauer has always been known as a worthy citizen of Will County and is well known, not only in Joliet but in many other parts of the county, and is held in esteem by his friends who are enthusiastic in their support of his candidacy.

Henry M. Bauer is a son of the late Michael and Elizabeth Bauer of Joliet. His mother was formerly Elizabeth Hauser, daughter of Thomas and Catherine Hauser of Mokena. She was born and raised in Mokena.

In this review we are glad to compliment Henry M. Bauer upon the reception his announcement has created over the county and would suggest that all take his candidacy into consideration when in the booth at the primary.

Ruth Brannon

Of Manhattan, Candidate for Democratic Nomination for U. S. Congress 11th Dist.

Ruth Brannon of Manhattan is making a strong appeal for nomination as Democratic candidate for U. S. Congress in the 11th District her candidacy is meeting with favorable comment throughout the entire district.

Ruth Brannon is backed with excellent education and training and would be able to fill this office to the full satisfaction of the people of this district.

She is the possessor of an excellent reputation and counts her friends by the thousands, and carries the endorsement of many prominent citizens of the 11th District.

In making this review we gladly call the attention of the reader to this candidacy and suggest that the Democratic candidate for Representative in the U. S. Congress from the 11th District be given careful thought on primary day.

Frank W. Wheeler

Probate Clerk of Will County

Frank W. Wheeler, Probate Clerk of Will County, a prominent member of official life who seeks re-nomination and re-election to the office of Probate Clerk is one of the leading men of the community, owes his advancement into the list of notables, to the fact that the pendulum of praise always swings toward the men who are backed by rugged honesty of purpose. It is such men who win the confidence of its citizenry. His climb to prominence, however, has not been without its trials. But that is true of any public official, for there are always those who would have a man use his office for ulterior purposes, giving out "plums" as it were, and other unwarranted favors.

Thus when a man takes his office seriously and keeps in mind the interests of the taxpayers rather than a few favored ones, there is a natural inclination to criticize.

But his record of treating one and all alike, and straightforward manner of dealing, has been recognized and has pleased the masses. After all, that is a finer tribute than the so called "clever politician" who sometimes forgets the citizenry. Such men are indeed well worth while.

CANDIDATE FOR

Democratic Nomination for State Representative 41st District

Michael J. Breen

of Elwood

Candidate for Democratic Nomination for Sheriff

As the time for the spring primary draws close the consensus of opinion seems to point to the nomination of Michael J. Breen of Joliet for Sheriff on the Democratic Ticket.

Michael J. Breen always has been known as an able man in business and farming affairs. He has always taken an interest in public affairs and has been a loyal member of the Democratic party and many prominent Democrats feel that the party owes him the nomination for his services of the past.

Mr. Breen is thoroughly qualified for the position and in the event of his nomination would make an excellent candidate as people generally are cognizant of his ability to fill the position. He would be able to direct the affairs of the office as he has natural ability as a leader and in other duties whether clerical, detective or carrying out the orders of the court he is recognized as thoroughly competent.

In making this review we are pleased to call the attention of the Democratic voters of Will County to the candidacy of Michael J. Breen and would suggest that you remember him on primary day.

their heartiest and sincerest thanks for their support and cooperation in our recent dance which was a great success. Especial recognition is given to Cantigny Post No. 367, V. F. W. of the U. S., Joliet, Ill.; Chicago Heights Post No. 2825, V. F. W., Wm. J. Nellis Post No. 1489, V. F. W., Chicago; and Centennial Post No. 1933, V. F. W. Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Becker, have moved into their new quarters on the Lincoln Highway formerly the Popo Inn. It is expected that Comrade Becker, who is quartermaster of Wm. Martin Post No. 725, V. F. W., of the U. S. will reorganize the business that was formerly conducted there.

All the comrades of Wm. Martin Post No. 725, V. F. W., join in wishing Comrade Becker the greatest of success in his new undertaking.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Slagle have returned to their home in Lincoln Estates from Chicago where they had gone for the winter months.

Comrade Slagle is Senior Vice-Commander of Wm. Martin Post No. 725, V. F. W., and Sister Rachel Slagle is president of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Wm. Martin Post. WELCOME HOME COMRADE AND SISTER SLAGLE!!

Mrs. Elizabeth Walker has returned from Denver, Colorado where she had gone to visit her sister who had been ill and has subsequently passed on. The sympathy of the comrades of Wm. Martin Post No. 725, V. F. W. is sincerely extended to Mrs. Walker who is the mother of our energetic young officer of the day, Wm. H. Lockwood of the Wm. Martin Post. God bless her.

Great satisfaction and much praise is lavished upon our Comrade A. M. Elphick, the leader of the orchestra at our recent dances. Comrade Elphick "Aims to Please" and in that the guests at our dances seemed to greatly concur in. Such untiring effort and zeal cannot long go unrecognized. Mr. and Mrs. Elphick were both pleased and surprised to meet some life long friends of theirs at the dance. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Scribner and Miss Greata Janes. Mr. Elphick entertained his friends at his home after the dance.

MOKENA

Over 200 farmers and members of their families attended the farm bureau meeting held last Friday evening in the St. Mary hall. County Adviser Braham of Joliet and Mr. M. E. Johns principal of the Mokena public school gave addresses. The local farm bureau members orchestra furnished the music for the evening and refreshments were served.

Alvin Kohl was the headliner of the musical program, playing a guitar and singing. A very entertaining and profitable evening was enjoyed. Judge John F. Schulz advises that thru a misunderstanding an error was made in this column regarding his recent fire loss. The damage to the garage was covered by insurance written by Bartels & Cooper, but he has no insurance on his automobile, which luckily was not in the garage at the time of the fire.

Jack Horras of Chicago visited with Mokena friends the past week.

Miss Mildred Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Butler former Mokena residents, now located at New Lenox, was married January 13 in Yorkville, Illinois to Lyle Rank of Sheridan, Illinois. They have gone to housekeeping in Sheridan. The many friends of the bride wish her much happiness.

Mrs. Jacob Barenz who has been ill is much improved.

Mrs. Philip Stieg underwent an operation in the Silver Cross hospital, Joliet last week. She is convalescing nicely.

Mrs. J. Grothendick who underwent a serious major operation in the Silver Cross hospital last week, is improving slowly.

The Mokena M. E. Ladies Aid will meet at the home of Mrs. Florence Steele, Thursday, March 8. Pot luck lunch at one o'clock. Everyone welcome.

SCHOOL NEWS

As Thursday is the first of the month of March the intermediate room is busy making patterns of dutch boys, girls, dog carts, wind mills, tulips, jonquils, etc, with which to decorate the room.

The fifth grade has just finished an interesting study of the Middle Atlantic States in geography and now is ready to make a study of the Southern States of our country.

The Junior High school is happy to have all of their pupils back. We hope our attendance will be better from now until the end of the year. The High school played Orland Park, Wednesday night.

The High school entertained at assembly last Friday with a dance, "The Alice Blue Gown" in which Lydia Baudry, Eleanor Hall, Edna Lorenz, Grace Moriarty, Dorothy Homering, and Genevieve Pfleger wore dresses with long blue skirts gathered at the waist, with a blue flowered top and white sash, collar, and puff sleeves and poke-bonnets tied on their head with blue ribbons. The chorus was ably assisted by the High school's leading Prima Dona, Bernice Muehler, who wore a blue evening gown, hat to match, and blue and black evening wrap.

This Friday, at assembly, March 2, the High school presents "The Maker of Dreams" starring Gertrude Sippel and Elsworth McGovney. Edward Lauffer is "The Maker of Dreams". All parents and friends are invited to attend this fanciful romance of those mediaeval characters, Pierrot and Pierrette.

You wouldn't buy a horse and buggy...
THEN WHY USE ANCIENT HEATING METHODS
WHEN RATES FOR GAS ARE SO LOW?

Is your heating plant out of date—like the old-fashioned horse and buggy? Do you still put up with soot, dust, dirty ashes, and back-breaking furnace drudgery?

Why not get rid of all this mess and nuisance! Heat the modern way—with gas. Gas heat is as different as night is from day, from all other forms of heat. You have no furnace worries from one year to the next! Your house stays clean, because gas gives off no soot or dirt. You say good-bye to coal shovels and dirty ash buckets. And every hour, day and night, your house is kept at the correct temperature—automatically.

To prove that every home can afford to heat with gas, we'll install it at our expense . . . and remove it at our expense, if you don't like it.

Low rates—you invest nothing to try

Rates for heating homes with gas are now one-half of what they were in 1920-31.

And—you can try gas heat without one cent of investment! We will install a burner in your present furnace or boiler at our own expense. You pay only the rental on the equipment, which amounts to $3 a month in the average home. You try it for a month, two months, a year. And if within the year you find that you are not completely satisfied with gas, we will take it out at our expense and replace your former heating equipment in good workmanlike order. But—if you decide to keep gas heat—as we think you will—the rental you have paid applies on the purchase price of the equipment.

Act now!

Don't delay! Investigate this liberal offer on gas heat today. Call your nearest Public Service Company office for full information.

YOUR GAS METER

You are proud of the accuracy of your fine watch. And rightly. It's an excellent precision instrument. Yet it is no more accurate than your gas meter. By official test made before meters are installed—and recurrent checks within specified periods—the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois attains in its meters as high standards of accuracy as the fine watchmaker who manufactures your pocket time-piece.

Before installation, every meter must pass the rigid test of official inspectors. In the Company's laboratories meters are checked according to specifications set up by the United States Bureau of Standards. A carefully measured volume of gas is passed through the meter and it is adjusted to exact accuracy.

Gas heat can be installed in your home without allowing the house to cool off

Time Lost is Money Lost

It costs money to be sick. You see it directly if your pay envelope is short. You lose out on some important work if you live on a farm or if you are one of the few who are not docked for lost time. You can't afford to show up on the job unless you are feeling fit. The boss wants results—not excuses.

How many times do Gas on Stomach, Headache, Sour Stomach, "That Tired Feeling," "That Morning After" Feeling, Neuralgic, Rheumatic, Sciatic, Muscular or Periodic Pains keep you at home or interfere with your doing a full day's work?

All these troubles are caused or made worse by too much acid in your body. To correct this condition take

ALKA-SELTZER

The New Pain Relieving, Alkalizing, Effervescent Tablet.

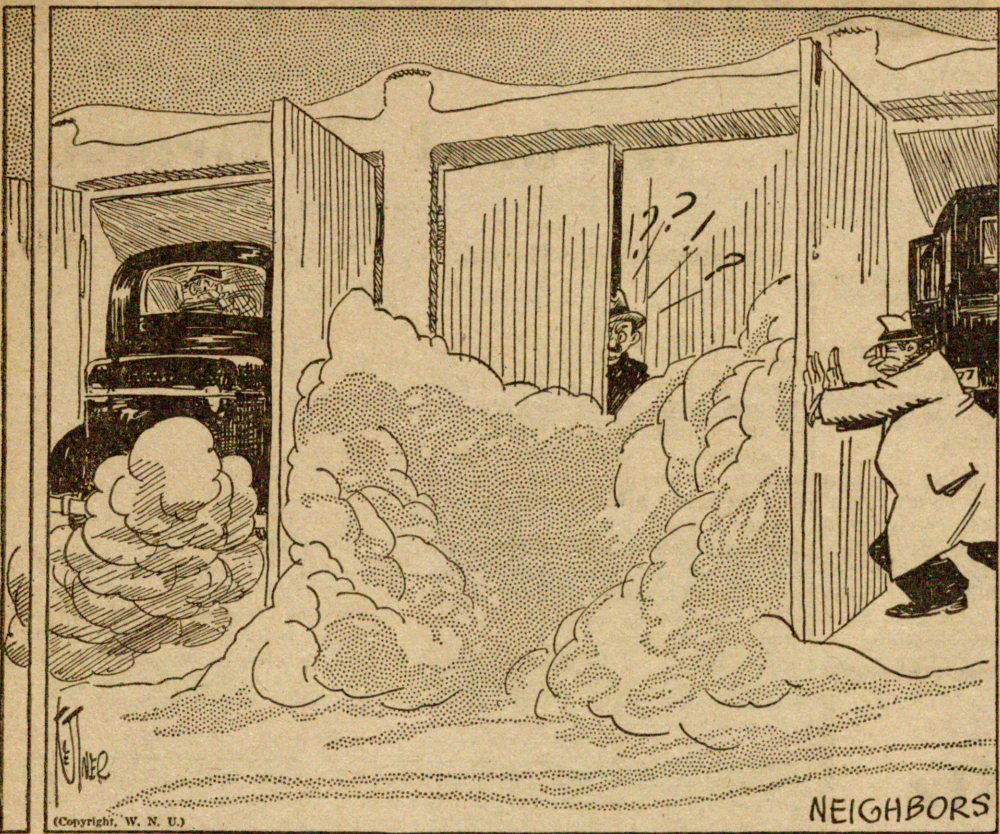

It is called Alka-Seltzer because it makes a sparkling alkaline drink, and as it contains an analgesic (Acetyl-Salicylate) it first relieves the pain of everyday ailments and then by restoring the alkaline balance corrects the cause when due to excess acid. Alka-Seltzer is pleasant to take, harmless, non-laxative.

"THE NAME IS SMITH"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IF UNCLE SAM should ever call the roll of all his children, the chances are that more people would respond to "Smith" than any other family name. They'd outnumber the prolific Browns and Williamses by about two to one and the only slightly less prolific Joneses and Johnsons by about three to one.

Now, since Smith is such a very common name, it naturally follows that one who bears it has to be considerably above the average to lend distinction to it and to be outstanding among his fellowmen. The fact is that there have been plenty of just such men, as witness the fact that one standard encyclopedia of American biography contains the names of no less than 202 Smiths who have been famous enough to be included in its list of notables and another contains 230 such names.

From the earliest days of American history the Smiths have played an important part in making that history. For it was the doughty Capt. John Smith, an English adventurer, who led the little band of colonists to the shores of Virginia in 1607 and at Jamestown founded the first permanent English settlement in America, a settlement destined to grow into a colony that was to give a new nation its first President.

Although we think of Smith primarily as a soldier, the fact is that among his books was a treatise on seamanship that is a model of its kind. That was "A Sea-mans Grammar, or, An Accidence, The Path-way to Experience necessary for all young sea-men, or those that desire to go to Sea," published in 1626. It was not only the first printed book on seamanship, naval gunnery and nautical terms published in England but it has also served as the backbone of practically every book on seamanship published in the last 300 years.

Just as a Smith was the founder and ruler of the first permanent English settlement in America, so it is appropriate that a Smith should be one of the 56 immortals who signed the Declaration of Independence and thus become one of the "Fathers of the Republic." He was James Smith, born in Ireland about 1720, then an emigrant to Pennsylvania where he grew up to become a leader in the agitation for freedom from British rule. He wrote an essay "On the Constitutional Power of Great Britain Over the Colonies in America" which is said to have given "the first strong impulse to the patriot cause in the colony of Pennsylvania."

America's official national anthem, as everybody knows, is "The Star-Spangled Banner." But there is another song, an unofficial "national hymn," which is sung on patriotic occasions quite as much as is Key's stirring composition and it was written by a Smith. Samuel Francis Smith was his name and he was born in Boston in 1808. While a student at Andover theological seminary he wrote the words of the song beginning "My Country, 'Tis of Thee" and on July 4, 1832, this song, to which has been given the simple title of "America," was sung for the first time at a children's celebration in the Park Street church in Boston.

Before attending the Andover seminary to prepare himself for his lifework as a Baptist minister, Smith had been graduated from Harvard in 1829, in the same class with Oliver Wendell Holmes. And it was Holmes who, in his class reunion poem, "The Boys," told in these words how this Smith had lent distinction to that commonplace name.

"And there's a nice youngster of excellent pith;
Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith!
But he chanted a song for the brave and the free—
Just read on his medal, 'My country, of thee!'"

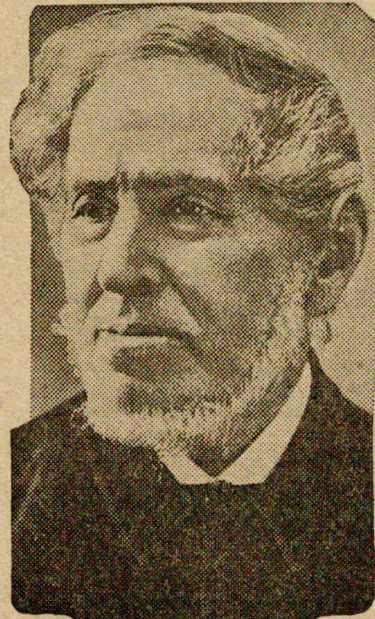

A Smith was the founder of the first permanent English colony in America; a Smith was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, a Smith wrote our "national hymn." In line with those facts, it would be appropriate if a Smith were elected President of the United States. But so far, no one of that name ever has been Chief Executive. But that doesn't mean that a Smith never has aspired to the Presidency. On the contrary, no less than four of them have.

Perhaps you think that Alfred Emanuel Smith, who won the Democratic nomination but lost the election in 1928, was the first and only one of the name who ever made a bid for occupancy of the White House. But he wasn't. Eighty-four years before New York's famous governor had shied his equally famous "Brown Derby" into the Presidential ring, a native of Vermont, was an active candidate for the high office.

He was Joseph Smith, founder of the Mormon religion in New York in 1830, who was driven by persecution first to Ohio, then to Missouri, and finally to Illinois, where the "City of Saints" was established at Nauvoo. Soon he had such a large following that both the Whigs and the Democrats began bidding for Mormon support and Smith began having delusions of grandeur as to his political power.

In 1844 he took the bold step of condemning publicly both parties and announcing his candidacy for the Presidency of the United States.

SAMUEL FRANCIS SMITH

Several thousand of the saints went forth to preach the gospel of Mormonism and to electioneer for their leader. But his ambition came to a tragic end on June 14 when he met a martyr's death in the jail at Carthage where he and his brother, Hyrum, were shot down by a mob of militia, who were there to protect them.

At the same time that Joseph Smith was casting an eye toward the White House another Smith was molding a new political party which would in the future nominate him for the Presidency. He was Gerritt Smith, a New Yorker destined for future fame as a philanthropist, but in those days an ardent abolitionist. He organized the Liberty party at Arcade, N. Y., in 1840, and in 1848 and again in 1852 was its candidate for President. He had three other claims to fame—as a backer of John Brown, whom he supplied with money for Brown's ill-fated attempt to free the slaves, as the man who, with Horace Greeley, at the close of the Civil war, signed the bail bond of Jefferson Davis, and as the man whose benefactions, during his lifetime, totaled close to $8,000,000.

The next Smith who aspired to be a President was one Green Clay Smith, a native of Kentucky who served in the Mexican war, was elected to the Kentucky legislature and at the outbreak of the Civil war became a colonel in the Union army in which he rose to the rank of brigadier general. Elected to congress while still in the field, he resigned from the army, and while serving in congress was appointed second territorial governor of Montana by President Johnson. After three years in that office he resigned to enter the Baptist ministry, and in 1876 he was the first candidate of the Prohibition party for President. Thus half a century before Alfred E. Smith was a "wet" candidate for that position, Green Clay Smith was a "dry" candidate, and both to the same result—defeat!

The same fate befell the only Smith who was ever a candidate for Vice President. He was William Smith, a native of North Carolina who emigrated to South Carolina at an early age, became a lawyer and served in various state offices and in the United States senate. In 1829 Smith received Georgia's seven electoral votes for Vice President, which was approximately 100 short of enough to elect him. Eight years later he tried again. This time he did a little better. He got 23 electoral votes but one of the only slightly less prolific Johnsons got the job—Richard M. Johnson of Kentucky. Twice Smith was offered the appointment of associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, but both times he declined, thereby depriving the Smith family of its two known chances of being represented in that august body.

Although no Smith has ever yet been President or Vice President, more than one has been an aid to Presidents by serving in their cabinets. They began away back in 1801 when Samuel Smith, a Pennsylvanian, was secretary of the navy for a short time under President Jefferson, serving without compensation. He was succeeded in that post by his brother, Robert Smith, who had a rather remarkable record as a cabinet officer in that he held no less than three portfolios—secretary of the navy from 1802 to 1805 and attorney general from March to December, 1805, both under Jefferson, and secretary of state from 1809 to 1811 under Madison.

Next came Caleb Blood Smith of Indiana who was Lincoln's secretary of the interior from 1861 to 1863, then Hoke Smith of Georgia who held the same portfolio under Cleveland from 1893 to 1896. Another member of the family, Charles Emory Smith, was postmaster-general under McKinley from 1898 to 1901 and held over in that position under Roosevelt until 1902.

An exploring trip through the many pages devoted to the Smiths in any encyclopedia of biography reveals any number of interesting men and women of this family name. There was Charles Henry Smith, the Georgian, who made his pen name of "Bill Arp" famous with his humorous stories of the Confederacy. There was that earlier humorist, Seba Smith, a Yankee from Maine, who, as "Major Jack Downing of Downingville" was self-appointed adviser to President Andrew Jackson, and aided in making some political history with his satirical letters.

Julia Evalina Smith and her sister, Abigail H. Smith of Connecticut were active and early woman suffragists, Julia becoming known throughout the country as one of the five "Glastonbury sisters," who resisted the payment of taxes because they were denied suffrage and submitted to the sale of their property by the town authorities rather than obey the law. That was nearly a century ago, in the days when woman's place was definitely "in the home," and long before there were "suffragettes."

Most of the present generation of Americans know F. Hopkinson Smith as a novelist and author of "Caleb West," "Colonel Carter of Cartersville," "The Tides of Barnegat," etc., but how many know that he also won distinction as an artist and an engineer, and that, in the latter role, he was the man who built the foundation for the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor? And how many know that another man named Smith added the word "telegram" to the English language? He was Erasmus Peshine Smith, a New York journalist, educator, and jurist, who, through the Albany Evening Journal suggested the word "telegram" as a substitute for the cumbersome "telegraphic dispatch," current in those times.

The Smith family includes a number of great heroes and also some great rogues. Be it remembered that Joshua Hett Smith was one of the principals in the Arnold-Andre treason plot during the Revolution, and it was largely due to Smith's "falling down on the job" that the young British officer was captured and the plot exposed. John Smith, a United States senator from Ohio, was involved in the Burr conspiracy and an effort made to expel him from the senate for it missed by just one vote.

Down in the Texas Panhandle is a county named "Deaf Smith," a vast expanse of territory which perpetuates the fame of Erastus Smith, a native of New York, who lived in Mississippi as a boy, then went to Texas while it was still the Lone Star republic, and became one of the heroes of the Battle of San Jacinto. It was he who, upon the orders of Gen. Sam Houston, burned Vince's bridge, the only avenue of escape for the vanquished in that battle, whoever it might be, then dashed up on a foam-covered horse shouting, "I have cut down Vince's bridge. Now fight for your lives and remember the Alamo!"

There is no such memorial (although there should be) for Jedediah Strong Smith, a New Yorker who was much more deserving of the title of "The Pathfinder" than was Gen. John C. Fremont. A member of the famous Ashley-Henry expedition of 1823 and one of the founders of the Rocky Mountain Fur company, he was not only the first American to pass over what later became the Oregon Trail, but his wanderings and his trail-blazing exploits in the western wilderness made him truly one of the great explorers of his day.

High up in the pine-clad Black Hills of South Dakota stands a shaft of white stone which marks the place where Henry Weston Smith

"SOAPY" SMITH

("Preacher Smith" they called him), the Methodist circuit rider, was killed by a party of Sioux warriors in 1876 because he placed his duty, as he saw it, above personal safety. A native of Connecticut, "Preacher Smith" served in the Union army during the Civil war, then went West, and arrived in Cheyenne, Wyo., at the height of the Black Hills gold rush. He held the first church services ever held in the Hills and became an outstanding figure in its early history as the "Sky Pilot of Deadwood," a career cut short by his death at the hands of the Indians while on his way to preach in Crook City, ten miles away. Another memorial to him stands over his grave in Deadwood, a life-size statue of him carved from the red stone characteristic of that region.

Up in Alaska among the rocky cliffs overlooking Skagway is a unique memorial to another Smith. It is a rocky profile of heroic size, naturally shaped and painted white to resemble a skull and bearing the words "Soapy Smith's Skull." Thus does Skagway memorialize Jefferson Randolph Smith, its mayor and boss in the roaring days of the Klondike gold rush, and one of the most picturesque villainous figures in frontier history. A native of Georgia, Smith was a gambler in various Colorado mining towns, a "con man" of the first water (his nickname of "Soapy" coming from one of his schemes of fleecing the "suckers" with cakes of soap wrapped in $20 bills), and later the king of the Denver underworld.

When he went to Alaska he became the big man of Skagway, but his high-handed methods soon got him into trouble. There was talk of vigilante methods to rid the town of him, but Frank Reid, an engineer, saved them the trouble. "Soapy" tried to bluff Reid, but Reid couldn't be bluffed. A bullet from his gun put an end to this most famous bad man of the last frontier.

Another Smith, but very different from Soapy's kind, lost his life in the wild days of the old frontier. He was Thomas J. Smith, known as "Green River Tom" Smith, a quiet, mild-spoken young man, but one of the bravest who ever upheld the law in the West. He first made a reputation for himself as marshal of the town of Kit Carson, Colo., when it was "end of steel" on the Kansas Pacific. Then he was called to the roaring cattle town of Abilene, Kan., which he "tamed"—not with six-shooters but with his fists.

In eleven months Smith set a record in making it a law-abiding place which not even his successor, the famous Wild Bill Hickok, could match. But he met his death at last—murdered by two ranchmen whom he tried to arrest peaceably, and failed only because a cowardly deputy sheriff "ran out" on him.

One other Smith is deserving of mention before this article is concluded. He was John T. Smith, famous in the early days of Missouri as a duelist and land speculator, but the thing which most distinguished him was the way in which he lent distinction to that name. He realized that there are many John T. Smiths, so in order to make his different from the rest, he began signing himself John Smith T. and John Smith T. he was known to the day of his death.

As to other Smiths who lent distinction to the name—well, there are several hundred of them listed in the encyclopedias of biography to which the reader of this article is respectfully referred.

Origin of the Alphabet Still Point of Dispute

Whether the alphabet was invented by the Semitic miners who were working in the turquoise mines of the Sinai peninsula, or whether the alphabet originated with the Phoenicians, scholars are not yet ready to decide, says Science Service, reported by the Kansas City Star. Prof. Roman Butin of the Catholic University of America says, however, that in any case the alphabet came into existence no later than 2000 B. C. Professor Butin spoke on the origin of the alphabet before a meeting of the Archeological Institute of America at Syracuse, N. Y.

Up to a few years ago the Moabite stone of the Ninth century B. C. was the oldest Phoenician writing known. Then alphabetic writings by the Phoenicians as old as the Thirteenth century before Christ were found at Byblos. The practical-minded Phoenicians were commonly credited with giving the world the alphabet.

The discovery that stone tablets from the Sinai peninsula bore crude alphabet characters upset theories as to age and origin of the alphabet. Professor Butin, who examined the tablets in Cairo, and made a translation, still is studying their significance.

In these tablets, he said, the alphabet system is not yet standardized. The shorthand of alphabet signs is shown in a transitional stage from its picture origin. A house, "Beth," might be drawn with one or two rooms, with or without a door, but it was still "Beth" and it stood alphabetically for B. A human head might be drawn in profile or full face, but it was recognized as a human head, and its value was R, the first letter in the word "Resh."

The names of the objects which the Sinai people used in their alphabet seem to be identical with those on which the Phoenician alphabet was founded, Professor Butin said. But the oldest Phoenician signs known already are so conventionalized that they seem to be evolved from earlier forms.

There is a strong temptation to say that the Phoenician alphabet, as it appears on the oldest monuments, is evolved from the script of the Sinai tablets, Professor Butin said, but this is not proved. The original form of the Phoenician alphabet still is to be found, and it may turn out to be older than the Sinai tablets, which are dated at about 1900 or 2000 B. C.

head of hogs.

Mr. John Kimmel, living in Orland
Township, operates and owns 140 acres four miles southeast of Orland Park. Mr. Kimmel has been on this farm for a number of years. His application shows that during the two base years of 1932 and 1933 he grew an average of 65 acres of corn and farrowed and marketed an average of 55 head of hogs a year.

It is of interest indeed to our many, many people in Cook County to note that there is much activity on the part of our farmers, looking towards the reduction of the corn and hog surpluses. There are many who think of Cook County as not having much agricultural interest and there are others who think of such agricultural interests as there are as being only along the line of truck farming and dairying, and so it is interesting to note that there are several other counties in what is known as the northeastern district which takes in a total of eleven counties that have less acreage of corn and less of hogs than does Cook.

It is interesting to note that in the wheat program there were only three other counties in this northeastern district with more signers, subscribing to the program than was the case with Cook. Likewise, it is interesting to all of our readers to note that Cook County has the second largest farm organization unit in the way of the Farm Bureau in the state. No doubt their activity and the attitude common towards the Farm Bureau in Cook County has much to do with the favorable attitude and co-operation by our Cook County farmers in the reduction program and activities of the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Lost 30 Pounds of
Fat In 3 Months

Dizzy Spells Gone

"To-day I started my 4th jar of Kruschen. First I must tell you I lost 30 lbs. in 3 months. I still wish to lose 25 or 30 lbs. I weighed 184 now I weigh 154. Do I feel good—boy I can say I feel better than I've felt in 10 years. Everything was wrong with me from headaches to backaches, my arms and hands would fall asleep at any time.
They don't anymore. I used to have dizzy spells. Don't any more. Heartburn was so bad I couldn't eat or sleep.
Don't have it any more." Mrs. Arthur
Willette, Ferndale, Mich., Aug. 27, 1933.
Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, HARMLESS way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drugstore—the cost for a jar that lasts 4 weeks is not more than 85 cents and if after the first jar you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.
When you take your little daily dose of Kruschen you'll be joyfully free from constipation—you'll gain that glorious Kruschen feeling—no more headaches, acidity or shortness of breath—no more nervousness or sleepless nights.
